LAND LAW COMMISSION

A. Lewis, Jr., chairman of the Advisory Land Law Commission, stated this morning that the time was not yet decided when that body should go to the other islands to hold sessions. He was awaiting the return of Mr. Cooke from Maui to confer with the other members. Mr. Smith being here from Hilo. The other members are William A. Kinney, Alfred W. Carter, Carl S. Smith, Samne M. Kanakani, William B. Thomas and Joseph P. Cooke, secretary.

"It should be understood," Mr. Lewis said, "that the questions the Commission has to deal with are more of legislation than of administration."

"We cannot decide where to go first until the Commission has a meeting. It is intended to hold one session at Walluku, one at Lihue and one at Hilo."

Asked if there were any radical amendments to the land laws so far suggested, Mr. Lewis replied:

"No. The Commissioners are just reading up to find whether or not any changes in the law are desirable."

Secretary Cooke, by the way, returned from Maui this morning.

A NAVY MAN'S TALK ON OAHU

"They're keeping us on the move," remarked a Navy man to a S. S. representative this morning as he flicked the ash from his cigar.

"This cigar might very well be used as a text for what I feel like saying with regard to this jewel of an island, this—what do you call it?—Oh Ah Who? Oahu? Now I've got it."

"Torpedoes are cigar-shaped; war-balloons are cigar-shaped; submarines are cigar-shaped."

"I have never before been to Oahu, but I expect to come here many times and each time I come I expect to see greater improvements along lines of defense and offense, until I hear the expression 'the strength of Oahu' instead of that long popular saying, 'the strength of Gibraltar'."

"A generation hence Oahu will figure in the history books very prominently, and it will be all 'Oahu' and not much 'Hawaii'."

"This little island will come very near taking the record for swift jumping into fame and she is on her way now and is going fast. You here are all very keen on Pearl Harbor development, but the Pearl Harbor plans, as now, are small to what the realization will be. You will have the twenty thousand soldiers and it won't be many months before you have something of a fleet stationed in these waters. There will be torpedo boats and destroyers, submarines and mines, and what particularly interests me, for I've always made a study of aerial navigation, you will have war-balloons stationed here, war-balloons equipped with wireless receiving apparatus, if not senders, and war-balloons beyond the experimental stage."

"Washington is very much interested in this station in regard to wireless possibilities and for a long time has considered a wireless station of great power for Pearl Harbor, primarily because it would seem that since Pearl Harbor is to be the base the wireless station should be there. But Washington has been holding back on account of the experiments of the commercial wireless here and now it appears that the Kahuku wireless station and another at Barber's Point may cause the navy to establish nothing of a long-distance nature at Pearl Harbor, limiting the projected Pearl Harbor wireless station to a plant designed merely to handle official business with men-of-war off port. Pearl Harbor is not a good position for a long distance wireless and the probabilities are that the Honolulu Naval Station wireless will be transferred to Pearl Harbor and that the commercial wireless will be used by the government for long distance."

"But I'm rambling. What I started to say was that I hope to be stationed here someday. I know of no place in the world where I'd rather be stationed. I want to stay here and watch Oahu grow."

NATIONAL CAMPAIGN DISCUSSIONS

the Middle West, where the brunt of the battle will be fought. Dover was more familiar with the East than the Middle West, and his acquaintance among eastern republicans will make him a valuable aid to the Treasurer, who is to gather the wherewithal to conduct the big fight.

Senator Bourne of Oregon is as much of a puzzle today as he was in days gone by when he apparently maintained most friendly relations with President Roosevelt, while defying the President and clamoring for a "second elective term." For several months prior to the Chicago convention Bourne proclaimed, through his newspaper interviews, that Taft, if nominated, would be easily and certainly defeated by Bryan. He was using this as an argument in favor of the renomination of Roosevelt. When the "second elective term" boom collapsed, Bourne was silent for a while, then he came out with another interview urging Taft, in his speech of acceptance, to assure the good people that he would not undertake to name his successor in the White House; he said this question of residuary legateship was going to be the dominant issue of the campaign. Following this interview, which, like his other utterances, was considered an affront to Taft, Senator Bourne packed his numerous trunks and hiked off to Hot Springs to personally urge Taft to take his advice. Taft ignored his advice, but every once in a while the Hot Springs dispatches announce that Taft and Bourne have played golf together. What is Bourne after? Is he trying to make amends for past insults offered to Taft? Is he trying to win the confidence of the republican nominee in the hope of becoming the administration leader in Oregon? Or is he merely keeping himself before the public? Report does not have anything to say of the actual relations, personal and political, that exist between Taft and Bourne. Hence the politicians are guessing.

The Bonaparte resignation rumor which made its appearance time and again last summer, and once during the past session of Congress, is again in evidence. It has become the stock in trade of newspaper writers, and it is now the rule to write a Bonaparte resignation story when there is nothing going on. Bonaparte is selected from among the various cabinet officers because his relations with the President are perhaps less intimate than those of any of his associates, and he, more than any other cabinet officer, has, at times, aroused the President by various acts. As a matter of fact there is good ground for believing that if this were not presidential year, Mr. Bonaparte would tender his resignation, and not tender it voluntarily, either. But the administration wants to carry Maryland and Bonaparte is a big factor in that state, and it would be impolitic to have a break with him when the fall campaign is approaching. Having served this long, Bonaparte will probably continue in the cabinet until the 4th of March. There is nothing a new man could accomplish between the middle of November and the 4th of March; therefore no particular justification for making a change for so short a time.

She will probably sail for the Coast early tomorrow morning, having about 500 tons of cargo for this port.

Wireless messages for passengers aboard the Tenyo were put aboard all this morning.

The Tenyo takes the mail to the coast, no mail having been taken by the Hilonian since the Toyo Kisen Kaisha boat will beat the Matson liner.

THE NEW INDUSTRY

Ralph S. Johnstone, deputy collector of Internal Revenue, returned this morning from a rush trip to Maui where he was needed to look after the work at the Kaupakula winery. He is enthusiastic over the quality of the wine which is being turned out and states that it will far excel in every way any wine which has ever been produced in Hawaii. The majority of the wine is sweet but a fine grade of claret is also being made.

The only liquor which has been distilled as yet at Kaupakula has been high proof brandy for use in fortifying the wine. Seventeen hundred gallons of this have been made already. The total output of wine for this year will run up to about 30,000 gallons and it will not be put on the market for at least two or three months as W. F. Cole, the manager, who is an expert on the subject, states that he will not allow a drop of the wine to be sold until it is in the best of shape.

The distilling of pineapple brandy has not been started yet. Manager Baldwin, of the Haku Fruit and Packing Company, who from whom Cole expects to get the pineapples for his liquor, has been ill with appendicitis, which has delayed the making of a contract. In the meantime, with the grapes coming in such profusion there has been no time for anything but the wine-making. It is expected that the crushing will be completed by the end of the month.

The farmers on Maui are feeling very enthusiastic over the winery and more and more grapes are being planted right along. So fast is the business increasing that before next year the plant will have to be enlarged so that it will have a capacity of 50,000 gallons instead of its present 30,000.

TWENTY TO TREAD THE HOT SAND

McCandless of Honolulu and Miss Hasinger of Los Angeles, coffee and pineapples were boomed. The headed cocoanuts and the illma leis were in great demand as souvenirs. The leis were called yellow ropes by the Shriners. Then the delegation was supplied with a great amount of literature by the Hawaii Promotion Committee. You know the cocoanut for this purpose is carved to show a man's face, with a tuft of whiskers on the chin and topped with a fez, and being hollowed out serves for a tobacco box or anything of that kind. As they are inscribed with the name and place of Aloha Temple they form a living advertisement of Hawaii.

"Next year the Conclave will be held at Louisville, Kentucky, where it is hoped Hawaii will again be represented."

Mr. McCandless did not have a copy of his report at hand when seen, but he gave an outline of the work done by the Aloha Temple delegation at St. Paul.

"Arriving Saturday night and getting ready on Sunday, we kept open house four days—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Hawaiian pineapples and coffee were served to all callers. A lot of literature supplied by the Hawaii Promotion Committee was distributed and we talked Hawaii day and night."

"The cocoanut souvenirs were the most popular ones there. A party broke into my room on Thursday and I met five women coming out with cocoanuts and illma leis. I did express an opinion on this violation of one's private apartment, but of course those people were of the class of professional souvenir hunters who stop at nothing. The great bulk of the people we met were perfect ladies and gentlemen."

"Mr. Swygart, Potentate of Osmian Temple of St. Paul, and his wife were just lovely. He took Mudge out for automobile drives. He said next time I come to St. Paul no hotel would be big enough for me, I should go to his house."

"One I met was a relative, Geo. W. McCandless of Syria Temple, Pittsburgh. We traded potentate caps and he said he would make me an honorary member of Syria Temple."

"There were new street lamps patterned after those at Los Angeles, five lamps in a cluster. The lamps had painted on them the names of different temples, and Aloha Temple of Honolulu was one of them."

"At Los Angeles last year the spear drill of Aloha Temple was something never seen before at a Conclave. There were six temples this year using spears and copying part of our drill. This is a credit to our drill captain, Col. Sam Johnson."
